PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

PUBLIC WORKS.

I again invite your attention to our Public Works. During the past year the expenses of that department have considerably exceeded the receipts. This, it is said, is mainly owing to the extraordinary floods of April, which caused much damage to a portion of the works. The fact that for the last five years the result has been the same, has induced the opinion that they will continue a permanent tax so long as they are controlled by the State; and a feeling prevails to a considerable extent that the entire interest of the State in them should be disposed of. The arguments in favor of this course are of two kinds. First, it is said that the State is not to be kept in the habit of paying for the repairs of these works, when they receive but little benefit from them. Second, it is said that the State is not to be kept in the habit of paying for the repairs of these works, when they receive but little benefit from them.

I am not insensible to the great advantages these works have been to the State, in developing its resources, and increasing its wealth. They have created for more capital than they have cost. But the counties not lying upon these works, and which receive but little benefit from them, are not to be kept in the habit of paying for the repairs of these works, when they receive but little benefit from them.
